Description

With Increasing Retinal Disease Prevalence and Unmet Clinical Needs – Which Drug will be the Next Lucentis?

The global prevalences of AMD (age-related macular degeneration) and diabetic retinopathy are increasing due to rising numbers of older people worldwide. In addition, the world is facing a "diabetes epidemic", with rapidly-increasing numbers of people with diabetes and diabetic retinopathy. A clear market opportunity exists for pharmacological treatments for diabetic retinopathy, dry AMD and other retinal disorders.

From 2009 to 2024, such treatments could repeat the commercial success that Lucentis achieved in the treatment of wet AMD. Our latest pharma report - World AMD and Diabetic Retinopathy Pharmaceutical Market 2009-2024 - examines prospects for the retinal disorder market over the next 15 years.

The rapid commercial success of Lucentis in treating wet AMD illustrates the high rewards for successful novel treatments in the retinal disorders market. There is a clear market opportunity for other drugs to treat diabetic retinopathy, a condition for which there are currently no approved pharmacological treatments. Our analysts believe there are further commercial opportunities for new treatments for geographic atrophy (advanced dry AMD) and for wet AMD. There is a need for clear advantages over existing wet AMD therapies, for improved clinical outcomes and ease of dosing. This report analyses prospects there.
